10PM Synopsis: Aside from a few very spotty, light showers in Central IN, activity has fizzled across the area with the storms collapsing just before they made it to the fairgrounds earlier this evening. Most of the surroundings areas did receive rain. We'd expect other than that spotty chance over the next hour to be dry into the overnight hours. Overall, chances into tomorrow look quite minor - a spotty shower tomorrow morning can't be ruled out but it's a very low threat right now. Winds should remain light and temperatures fall near 70F into tomorrow morning.

Hazardous Weather Alerts: NONE

10PM Weather Forecast

Thursday, August 19, 2021

5 Day Forecast Discussion: A spotty shower tomorrow morning and then a few scattered storms tomorrow afternoon cannot be ruled out, but coverage looks less impressive tomorrow vs. the past two days. We still need to keep an eye on some kind of decaying line of showers/storms in the PM hours Saturday, but right now it is not looking all that impressive. The main activity Sunday still looks to be south and east of the area. We likely remain quiet into Monday before storm chances try to re-emerge on Tuesday in a hit or miss nature. It still looks like the more organized activity will be north of the area.

Thursday, August 19, 2021

Long Range Forecast Discussion & Scenarios: We are still looking at slightly lesser chances into tomorrow, but we aren't 100% out of the wood. Into Saturday, we still need to watch for a front to come through in the PM hours – though data agrees the activity will be decaying as it arrives mid-day into the afternoon hours. That said, we can't 100% rule out a few lingering showers or storms nearby as the chart shows below indicating a 10% chance to see 0.29" if it rains. Following the passage of this boundary, quieter conditions are likely into early next week before hit or miss storm activity ramps up again next Tuesday and Wednesday. Data is slightly more keen on locally higher totals on Wednesday. As far as temperatures, we look to get back into upper-80s the next few days with heat indices in the lower-90s. Temperatures tick up into the low 90s early next week with heat indices approaching the mid-upper 90s once again.
