6AM Synopsis: The forecast today looks to be similar to yesterday as hit and miss chances will once again be possible in the afternoon hours. Mostly dry hours are favored but a 20% - 30% of a storm capable of a brief heavy downpour, gusty winds, and lightning will be possible (mainly from 2 PM – 8 PM). Temperatures look to get into the mid to even upper 80's F today with generally weak winds. Clouds likely remain a persistent feature in the forecast today as well with some peaks of sunshine at times, especially into the afternoon hours.

6AM Weather Forecast

Thursday, August 19, 2021

5 Day Forecast Discussion: The best chances for precipitation over the next few days will be today and Saturday with some hit and miss opportunities mainly in the afternoon hours. Friday and Sunday opportunities look quite isolated and could see both days trend completely dry rolling foreword. Regardless, no severe weather is anticipated. Temperatures look to sit in the upper 80's F for high temperatures out through the weekend with Heat Index values near ~90 F possible. Winds look to be rather minimal the next few days as well.

Thursday, August 19, 2021

Long Range Forecast Discussion & Scenarios: Today's forecast will be very similar to yesterday's - very isolated chances for precipitation mainly in the afternoon and evening hours. Any cells would likely be pretty spotty, and do not look to hold much of a severe weather threat. With that said, any cell holds the potential for a locally heavier downpour, slightly elevated winds, and lightning. By no means are any days in this forecast considered a "washout". Tomorrow a ~10% chance is in place for an extremely isolated shower/storm in the PM. Most of Saturday look to stay dry before the next best chances work into the area late Saturday night into Sunday AM (still only ~30%). Will lean on the drier side Monday for now but think Tuesday will hold potential for some scattered precip chances. Temps out through mid next week will hover in the upper 80s with "feels-like" temps sitting near 90F. Winds also look to stay rather calm the next few days.
