Week 1 Forecast

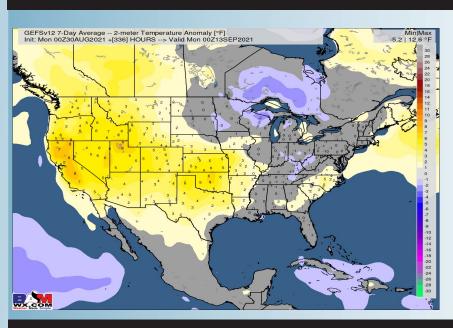

Long-Range Forecast Discussion

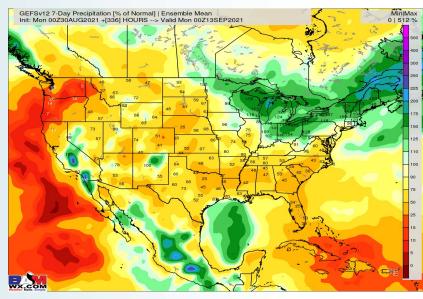

- A few hit and miss storm chances the next few days as Ida drifts off to the north and east.
 Overall impacts will be minimal. Temps likely run slightly above normal over the next week.
- Temps look to average back down to normal for week 2, with precipitation also looking near-normal. We will need to watch the potential for additional tropical moisture mischief towards the end of the week 2 period.
- The overall pattern looks consistent into mid-tolate September. Above normal temps are expected, and additional tropical moisture mischief will be continue to need to be monitored for ahead.
