Potential Ice Accumulation: MON 6 PM - TUE 12 PM CT

NEXT 5 DAYS: IMPORTANT FORECAST NOTES:

Precipitation:

- ✓ SUN: Anticipating dry conditions as high pressure builds in
- ✓ MON-FRI: The pattern will start to pick up and will offer multiple chances of rain through the week.
- ✓ MON: Need to watch for some light snow showers working into the area towards the late AM (8 - 11 AM) Then, getting into the evening we will need to keep an eye on a risk for freezing drizzle.
- ✓ TUE: Chances for a wintry mix on Tuesday, especially in the morning. Freezing rain will be a risk moving through the early AM, with a rain snow mix following behind late morning and into the noon timeframe. Low confidence exists at this time, but likely after 3 PM temperatures will warm above 32 F with rain.
- ✓ WED-THU: Spotty showers exit by late AM WED. Early PM looks to still have isolated rain chances, but the next pulse of rain moves in late in the afternoon and throughout Thursday AM.

Temperatures:

- ✓ Unseasonably cold air will continue across the weekend with temperatures beginning to “warm up” a bit come Monday. Temperatures then remain steady in the upper 30s for the week
- ✓ Wind chill values near - 6 to 0 F this AM and -8 to - 14 F will be possible SUN AM

Wind/Clouds:

- ✓ Today and Sunday will hold far more clouds than sun as temporary high pressure settles in this weekend.
- ✓ Cloud cover begins to increase again near Sunday mid to late afternoon with snow shower chances entering Monday AM
- ✓ Given a more active pattern next week, expect next week to just be cloudier in general.
