Potential Snow Totals: FRI AM Clipper

NEXT 5 DAYS: IMPORTANT FORECAST NOTES:

- ✓ FRI: Best timing for the clipper system for now would enter near 4 AM and from 4 - 9 AM this would be the best potential for 0.5 - 1" of snow. Beyond 9 AM confidence is still low, but the better accumulating snow corridor stays to the north, with precip exiting near 5 PM.
- ✓ SAT: Aside from a potential stray AM flurry prior to 8 AM, the day is looking dry.
- ✓ SUN: Low confidence present, but it is likely the AM remains dry with only a 10% chance for a stray flurry. Placement of a warm front can cause stray light precipitation in the afternoon as well. The risk is simply this day remains dry.
- ✓ MON: The AM would risk trending drier as well. There will be notable heavy rain moving in, but latest data suggests this will not arrive until very late PM.
- ✓ TUE: Some scattered light showers will be possible through the morning however then drier conditions will work in for the second half of the day.

Temperatures:

- ✓ Temperatures are moving to be slightly cooler than normal ahead.
- ✓ For the most part, temps will remain in the low to mid 30s F with temperatures slightly rising to the low 40s F after the front passes.

Wind/Clouds:

- ✓ After a mostly sunny day today, we will transition into a cloudier pattern into the weekend
- ✓ Some peaks of sunshine can occur in between storm systems, mainly SAT PM.
- ✓ Wind gusts will pick up Friday, sometimes reaching 20 - 30 MPH.
- ✓ Minor mention would be to watch for some isolated gusts with the cold front FRI PM / SAT AM of 30+ mph.
