NEXT 5 DAYS: IMPORTANT FORECAST NOTES:

- ✓ WED: Dry conditions favored
- ✓ THU: Watching for a clipper-like system. Data has finally started a drier trend and moving this to more of FRI AM. Thursday likely remains dry.
- ✓ FRI: Potential for accumulating snow is still present, starting as early as 4 AM. Would need to watch especially near sunrise for pulses of snow showers. Coverage likely works out by mid PM. For now, around 1" of snow is possible (app handling well)
- ✓ SAT: Aside from a potential stray AM flurry, data has also trended weaker, and the PM is looking dry
- ✓ SUN: Data would be at risk of being too heavy on Sunday with precipitation, especially in the AM. Low confidence exists, but late Sunday and especially into Monday can feature some periods of heavy rain.

Temperatures:

- ✓ Slightly below normal temperatures at play outside of Tuesday. (Wed - Sat)
- ✓ A warmup occurs to start next week ahead of the larger storm system

Wind/Clouds:

- ✓ We hold onto sunshine through Wednesday with high pressure
- ✓ Clouds will enter the picture into Thursday AM, transitioning into a cloudier pattern into the weekend
- ✓ Wind gusts will not be much of a factor except for WED, with some ranges of 25 - 30 mph. Next opportunity would arrive SUN PM ahead of rain showers at 25 - 35 mph
