NEXT 5 DAYS: IMPORTANT FORECAST NOTES:

- ✓ TUE: An overall dry day is expected on TUE. A very low-end chance for a shower exists late evening.
- ✓ WED: A few scattered showers may be present through the very early AM mainly prior to 8 AM. The afternoon likely leans on the dry side, but a low-end sprinkle/drizzle cannot be ruled out.
- ✓ THU: Watching placement of a warm front, but rain showers with a few rumbles of thunder are very likely. Rain threats will be an all-day event. Best opportunity arrives after 8 AM.
- ✓ FRI: Scattered rain showers/few rumbles of thunder at play, however timing still needs nailed down. The AM would look more favorable for precip with coverage tapering off in the PM.
- ✓ SAT: Watching a potential weak cold front, but for the most part any rain chances would be isolated/light.

Temperatures:

- ✓ Milder air will be in store for the majority of the work week in the upper 50s to mid 60s F
- ✓ Behind Friday's cold front, temperatures will start a cooling trend to a more seasonable look by the weekend.

Wind/Clouds:

- ✓ Skies will be clouding up on Tuesday, mainly in the mid to late PM hours, with the AM looking more sunny
- ✓ Once the clouds arrive Tue PM, WED-FRI will hold far more clouds than sun with rain chances.
- ✓ SAT-SUN will see a blend of sun and clouds
- ✓ Do not see a strong signal for excessive winds at this distance. Right now, expect storms on THU/ FRI to stay sub-severe (strong storms are possible with 35- 45 mph gusts)
